Desire for an overseas empire:
Many quotations for and against the war:

Good explanation of the historic context of desire for an American empire:

New markets for American goods:
Senator Albert Beveridge observed: "American factories are making more than the American people can use; American soil is producing more than they can consume. Fate has written our policy for us... The Philippines give us a base at the door of all the East... The power that rules the Pacific... is the power that rules the world....The mission of our race [is to control] the trade of the world....and the Philippines logically are our first target." Quoted in:

Source of raw materials for America’s factories

Strategic location for a naval base
Judge P.S. Grosscup in The Chicago Tribune, May 3, 1898:
"The Latin race...is a diminishing race; the Anglo-Saxon, pre-eminent in all the arts and ambitions that make this age powerful, is an increasing race. It is the only race that has, since the beginning of time, correctly conceived the individual rights of men, and is, on that account,...surviving, by fitness, the other races...
"The twentieth century will...undoubtedly cleanse and advance the stagnant peoples [of Asia]....Into this field the moral purposes and commercial courage of the Anglo-Saxon are bound to project themselves....This war has shown that we need a home port in Asiatic waters. The strategy of war has compelled us to obtain a temporary foothold in the Philippines. I believe we will find a way to make it permanent."
